

Purifying our minds each day.

How will we live this day called today?

In a society that is increasingly diverse and overflowing with information, we find within ourselves an immaturity that allows us to be carried along without even realizing it.

Precisely for this reason, we return to the teachings.

As we search for the intention of the Parent within the events that arise in our lives, we strive to align ourselves with the teachings.

We wish to live this day in “single-heartedness with God.”

How will we live this day called today?

When we turn our eyes to the world,
there are brothers and sisters who struggle with illness and suffer through difficult circumstances.

Precisely for this reason, we continue to ask ourselves: what can we do right now?

Extend a helping hand and walk alongside them.

Relay the intention of the Parent as we pray for their salvation.

We wish to live this day with the mind of “single-hearted salvation.”

We shall continue to connect our minds to Jiba,
as we strive for world salvation with our fellow brethren.

The world lies before us. At our backs is our tailwind,
God the Parent and Oyasama.

We shall live, purifying our minds each day.

Activity Goals

- Each person finds one person to help achieve salvation
- Create opportunities to interact with the teachings
- Engage in Hinokishin

Point of Emphasis

Gather members to attend
the 100th Tenrikyo Young Men's Association Convention